FOREPAUGH'S BEAUTY. This Phantom of Delight Sues the Old

Showman lan Philadelphia Court.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 3.—Mrs Paulus Keyser, otherwise known as Louise Montague, the $10,000 professional beauty, yesterday brought suit in the court of common pleas before Judge Pierce against Adam Forepaugh, the circus proprietor, to recover $2,400, being her salary under contract at $75 per week for thirty-two weeks in the circus senson of 1892. Miss Montague first city of a wild man being and did not reach the court-room this city of a week he was seen until half-past 12 o'clock. walked into the bar, also attended by neni to secure him in a car, his counsel. The court-room was filled in less than ten minutes with persons anxious to catch a glimpse of the professional beauty. She seemed in excellent spirits. Mr. Shakespeare briefly stated the beauty's case. Forepangh listened intently, and east his bright eye quickly over each juryman, smiling a quizzical smile of derision. He studiously avoided looking at Miss Montague, who sat eyeing him with a critical determined expression. She stepped up into the witness-box and was sworn. Then, gathering her sealskin sacque closely around her form, she swept down again, jerking her skirts aside so that they might by no chance be contaminated by the showchance be confaminated by the show-pill a dose. ACCIDENTS.

Accidents will happen in the best of regulated families. We make up our minds to do so and so, or to attend this place or that, when, accidentally, of course, something turns up to prevent it. Often we wish for accidents, but lo! and behold 'tis then they never come. How often when we were laid across our mother's knee have we prayed, for the slipper or the piece of fence railing with which she was warming the bosom of our pants, to break, accidentally, of course, before the first blow fell, but such was not our luck.

ACCIDENTS HAPPEN ONLY WHEN NOT WANTED. We had a nice article to hand you this week relative to different things, but particularly to
